In the Middle East, peace is vital to the future of the region. It is critical to the well-being of its people and is essential to the stability of the international system. Peace in the Middle East is a complex and multifaceted issue, involving not only the countries of the region, but also the United States, Europe, and other major powers.

The end to these conflicts cannot be forged through only a top down peace process, with only armed actors at the negotiating table. Instead, it requires a bottom up approach, involving the active participation of the affected communities.

Women in Peacebuilding | United Nations Women

The Essential Role of Women in Peacebuilding

Women have a unique role to play in peacebuilding, as they are often the ones most affected by conflict and the ones who bear the brunt of its consequences. By engaging women in peacebuilding processes, we can ensure that their perspectives and needs are taken into account, and that their rights are protected.
